2023 US Clay Storylines

Back for More

The 2023 tournament features five former singles champions - Cristian Garin (2019), Steve Johnson (2017-18), Jack Sock (2015), Fernando Verdasco (2014) and John Isner (2013).

The doubles field features a pair of past champions - Max Purcell (2022 with Matt Ebden) and San-tiago Gonzalez (2019 with Aisam-Ul-Haq Qureshi).

Nice to Meet You

Nearly half the singles field is playing at River Oaks for the first time. In all, thirteen players are making their debut here this year. One player, Aleksandar Kovasevic, is playing his first Tour-level clay court tournament while two others, Max Purcell and Aleksandar Vukic, are seeking their first ATP clay court match win.

Clay Court Specialists

Six players in the field have won ATP Tour clay court titles in their career, and three have won multiple on the surface. Both Cristian Garin and Fernando Verdasco own five career clay titles while Steve Johnson owns two, both coming here at River Oaks.

Age Is But A Number

Eight players in the field are in their 30s, with 39-year-old Fernando Verdasco and 37-year-old John Isner being the elder statesmen among the field. The youth movement is led by a pair of 21-year-olds - Brandon Nakashima and Juan Manuel Cerundolo. They are among the 11 players who are 25 or younger.

Texas Ties

Though he represents the Netherlands, Gijs Brouwer was born in Houston. Last year, he made his ATP Tour debut here as a qualifier and advanced to the quarterfinals.

Americans Abound

For the second year in a row, six of the tournament's eight seeds are American. This year, the top five seeds are Americans, which last happened 20 years ago when the event was held in Houston at Westside and the seeds were (1) Andre Agassi, (2) Andy Roddick, (3) James Blake, (4) Taylor Dent and (5) Vince Spadea.

Byes Beneficial?

The top four seeds get opening round byes, but not all get an advantage from the late start. In 2022, though top seed Casper Ruud withdrew, the remaining three players won their first matches. However, in 2019, all four of the players with byes wound up losing their first match.

All Around the World

There are 24 countries represented in U.S. Men's Clay Court Championship in 2023. Since 2008, there have been 62 countries represented at River Oaks. Players from 13 countries are in the singles field, led by 10 players from the United States.

Leading Men

Four active players have double digit win totals at US Clay, and they are all in the field this year. John Isner leads the way with an 18-11 record, followed by Jack Sock at 14-6, Steve Johnson at 12-5 and Fernando Verdasco at 11-5. They have a ways to go to catch the Open Era match wins leader Jimmy Connors and his 36-4 record in the tournament.

Grand Champs

Three Australians who have won Grand Slam doubles titles in the past year are in the draw here. This year's Australian Open winners, Rinky Hijikata and Jason Kubler, are top seeds, while 2022 Wimbledon champ Max Purcell is also in the draw.

College Club

Nine players from six different colleges are in the singles field. The University of Southern California leads with three players in singles - Steve Johnson, Emilio Gomez and Yannick Hanfmann while Illinois has two with Aleksandar Kovasevic and Aleksandar Vukic. John Isner played at Georgia, Marcos Giron at UCLA, Brandon Nakashima at Virginia and JJ Wolf at Ohio State.

Where To Watch

The Fayez Sarofim & Co. U.S. Men's Clay Court Championship will stream exclusively on the ESPN App in the United States. A total of 24 singles matches - each one played at Stadium Court - as well as the doubles final will be shown on the platform. Sam Gore and Jason Knapp will share play-by-play duties, Jimmy Arias and Luke Jensen will add color commentary and Blair Henley will join courtside and with interviews.

About The Tournament

The Fayez Sarofim & Co. U.S. Men's Clay Court Championship, an ATP Tour 250, is the only ATP event played on clay in North America. This year is the 111th edition of the U.S. Men's Clay Court Championship, which started in 1910. The tournament has been held in 21 different U.S. cities and has called Houston home since moving to Westside Tennis Club in 2001. This year marks the 14th time River Oaks Country Club has hosted this tournament.

ROCC, which is celebrating its 100th anniversary this year, first hosted tournament tennis in 1931, including an event on the World Championship Tennis circuit from 1970 into the mid-1980s. A prestigious prize money tournament in the ensuing years, River Oaks became home to this ATP event in 2008. This will be the 87th tournament contested at River Oaks.

The History of River Oaks

First Champion Ellsworth Vines

1940 Program

1947 Champion Jack Kramer

By: Van Berry

1930's-1940's

In the spring of 1931, the tradition began. The "tradition" would over time become the oldest tennis event in the world and the oldest sporting event in the United States still to be played at its original site. Yet it was born during the depths of one of our country's most inauspicious eras, The Great Depression. Member Jack Norton, a formidable player in his own right, knew many of America's top players and recruited them to a spring River Oaks garden party. Since the late 1920s he had arranged for America's Davis Cup players to train and hold exhibition matches at River Oaks, so they were very familiar with the club's hospitality. After securing commitments from five of the top 10 US players to compete in the inaugural event. Norton quickly enlisted the aid of the River Oaks tennis "regulars" to put on the first event: Palmer Bradley, Arthur Trum, Lewis White, W. Browne Baker, George Bruce, Wilson Saville, Ernie Langston, Lee Brinton, Henry Holden and Charles McLean. The players were put up at the Warwick for $1 per day. Sixty members each bought two season tickets for $5 each. The financial tally after the first event was a $1,500 loss to the club, but the event continued. Ellsworth Vines collected the first winner's trophy and went on to capture the U.S. Championships (now the US Open) later that summer.

During the first 11 years, the tournament was dominated by two men: Hall of Famers Bryan "Bitsy" Grant and Texan Wilmer Allison. Grant would capture three titles and reach two finals while Allison was a one-time winner and four-time finalist. Allison went on to become the tennis coach at the University of Texas. In the pre-war years, all tournaments consisted of a field of 64 players, and it became necessary to fill the field with local and regional players. World War II caused the suspension of the event from 1942-1945.

A "modern stadium" was built for the 1940 tournament, which saw 22-year-old Bobby Riggs earn the singles title. His finals victory over Bitsy Grant was to be his biggest match in Houston... until 33 years later when he and Billie Jean King would play before 30,000 in the Astrodome and 90 million worldwide.

Jack Kramer was the River Oaks champion in 1947 and would be known as the "father of American tennis". He later endorsed a tennis racquet, the Jack Kramer Autograph, which became one of the three most popular sporting goods items ever sold. Only the Stan Smith shoe by Adidas and the Wilson A2000 baseball glove have reached the level of sales the Kramer racquet enjoyed.

Along with Kramer, many of the game's greatest players competed at River Oaks in the early years, including Bill Tiden, Don Budge (the first Grand Slam winner in 1938) and Pancho Gonzales.

1950's

The 1950's was the last decade of tennis' virtuousness. Prize money battles, boycotts and legal struggles were still years away. This decade was thus the end of an era when tennis was played for the sheer joy of the game. As the River Oaks tournament entered the 1950's, a Veterans Division for players over 45 began. This allowed some accomplished local players to compete with former national champions.

Tony Trabert, one of the most dominant American players of the decade entered the 1955 Tournament as the World No. 1 player. He proceeded to power through the field with the loss of only two sets (all matches were three of five sets). His domination continued throughout the year as he captured Grand Slam singles championships at the French Open, Wimbledon and US Open and doubles titles at the Australian Open, the French Open and US Open. That is quite a remarkable year.

1957 marked the first year that an Australian player competed at River Oaks. Mervyn Rose became the first foreign born player to reach the River Oaks final. The following year Chile's Luis Ayala also reached the final and ushered in the international dominance at River Oaks that was soon to come in the 1960's.

The Langston Trophy, which honors the tradition of sportsmanship in tennis, was first awarded in 1957 to Barry MacKay. The award was named in recognition of longtime chairman Ernie Langston who is credited with elevating the tournament's stature to one of the premiere events in the world.

Ironically that same year it was noted that a player "deliberately" launched a ball over the fence in anger during an early round match. This was cause for considerable anxiety among some of the attendees. If they only knew what was coming ... or maybe it's better they didn't.

Texan Bernard "Tut" Bartzen captured the final tournament title of the decade as his opponent retired in the fourth set. This was the first of only two finals which ended in a player retirement. Tut would later join Texas Christian University as their men's coach and have a legendary career lasting 25 years.

1960's

The decade of the 1960's was a time of tremendous change in the world of tennis as the amateur era came to an end in '68. Here at River Oaks, the decade had a much more global presence as players from all parts of the world began to travel to Houston to compete. In '61, Rod Laver became the first foreign player to capture the singles title at River Oaks. In fact in the first 25 years of the event, only two foreign players even reached the final. Yet that would all change in the 1960's when only four American players reached the final. Barry McKay in '60 and Texan Cliff Richey in '68 were the only Americans to capture titles. Richey had been a ball boy for the event 11 years earlier.

In '62, Rod Laver won his second River Oaks title and his first Grand Slam, capturing all four Major championships in a calendar year. Following the River Oaks win he commented that in his opinion, River Oaks was the finest tournament in the world with the exception of Wimbledon. Laver was one of the primary reasons why tennis' Open Era occurred. After winning his first Grand Slam Laver turned pro in '63. At that time professional players were not allowed to compete in any of the major championships, and yet these events promoted themselves as having the game's greatest players contending. However Laver, who was the unquestioned best player in the world at the time, was not competing. The pressure over the next five years became too great and the slams finally opened to professionals. That decision was validated the following year as Laver again captured all four major singles titles becoming the only player to win two grand slams. Fellow Aussie and longtime River Oaks friend Roy Emerson appeared in 3 finals winning in '64. 2014 was the 50th anniversary of his title and we celebrated our 80th event with his 50th anniversary.

In '67 a young John Newcomb won our event and had perhaps his best year on tour as he also won the singles championships at Wimbledon and the US Open. He was awarded his winner's trophy here by a young congressman named George Herbert Walker Bush.

In all, our tournament winners in the 1960's went on to capture 30 Grand Slam singles and 28 Grand Slam doubles titles in that decade. Quite remarkable.

The final event of the decade was won by Yugoslavian Zeljko Franulovic as he defeated the very popular Rafael Osuna of Mexico. Osuna was also an exceptional doubles player winning three titles from '67-'69 each year with a different partner, less than two months after the '69 final, he was killed in a plane crash.

After a 13 year hiatus, women's tennis returned to River Oaks in '68 as Nancy Richey, sister of Cliff, won the championship giving the Texans a sweep of the singles crowns that year. In '69 Australian great Margaret Court, winner of 24 grand slam singles and 19 Grand Slam doubles titles, would own the final ladies single title ever played at River Oaks.

1970's

The 1970's began the era of professional tennis at River Oaks. The "Open Era" of tennis started in 1968 and players were now competing for established prize money. The World Championship Tennis tour arrived at River Oaks in 1972 with a purse of $50,000 and a winner's check of $15,000. With players like Rod Laver, Jimmy Connors, Roy Emerson and Ken Rosewall competing, the popularity of the tour grew quickly and the purse had more than doubled by 1977.

1970 – 1972 Ford Hubbard, Jr. 1973 – 1975 Charles R. Swain

1976 – 1977 Richard B. Curran 1978 – 1979 Matt H. Benton

In 1971, Texan Cliff Richey won his second River Oaks title and played the final three out of five set match in tournament history, as beginning the following year all matches would be played under the two out of three set format. En route to the finals Richey defeated Harold Solomon in what became the first "standing room only" crowd in River Oaks' history. Solomon was a freshman at Rice University and many of his local fans found their way into the stadium for the quarterfinal match with Richey. Solomon would go on to win the South-west Conference singles championship a few weeks later as well as the River Oaks title in 1976.

The ATP Tour was founded in 1973 and with it, established the standardized world ranking system that is still used today. Romanian Ilie Nastase, a frequent River Oaks competitor, was the first player to hold the tour's No. 1 ranking. Rod Laver became the tournament's only four time champion with his victory in 1974.

In 1976, World No. 1 Jimmy Connors was the prohibitive favorite to win the tournament only to withdraw with the "flu" before his first match was played. Unfortunately for some however, the Calcutta had already been held and Mr. Connors had gone for a sizeable sum. Thus, the enactment of the "Connors Rule" was occasioned. In short, you bought him...you own him. Ouch.

Over the past 20+ years I have viewed thousands of photos related to our tournament. None, in my opinion, capture the essence of the event more than the photo pictured of Bjorn Borg and Rod Laver taken after the 1974 final. At the time, Laver was age 35 and the unquestioned greatest player the game had ever known. Borg was exactly half the age of Laver and mostly obscure outside of the tennis world. And yet that would all change in less than two months when Borg would win the first of his 11 Grand Slam titles and change the face of the tennis and sports world. In the 1960's while winning two Grand Slams, sports fans all over the world began to hear of, and via television see Rod Laver (The Rocket). Through his exploits he was able to bring the already avid sports fan to the game of tennis. Borg however, through his distinctive persona and television appeal, brought the non-sports fan to tennis. His run of five consecutive Wimbledon titles from 1976 – 1980 were seen by fans who didn't know the difference between a backhand and a backboard. He was a global phenomenon and tennis' first pop icon. And though not known at the time, this photo so beautifully captures the great champion in Laver holding off the young Borg one final time before the passing of the torch. There is a wonderful rhythm of past, present and future champions who move through the sport as their careers blossom and mature. Generations have been able to experience these gifts during the past 80 years of tennis at River Oaks, and to me, this is the quintessential photo of that circumstance.

Houstonian Sammy Giammalva burst onto the pro scene in 1981 at River Oaks as a high school senior by reaching the final and falling to world ranked No. 6 Guillermo Vilas.

Perhaps you might recognize the 1984 description of this inaugural event, "Five hundred of the social elite enjoyed a French Picnic and viewed a montage' of fashion as dozens of models glided, strutted and danced the criss-cross runways spanning the pool". That's right; it was the beginning of the now iconic Tootsies Fashion Show. Though only one fashion show was held in tournament years 1984 to 1988, over 30,000 attendees have since enjoyed this renowned River Oaks tradition.

The 1985 tournament included an unknown 17-year-old who exited in the second round. Two months later that same 17-year-old Boris Becker was the Wimbledon champion. Many will remember his famous lunging volleys (yes there was a time when players regularly came to the net) and a smile that captured the essence of a young man conquering the tennis world.

1986 and 1987 champion Jimmy Arias commented "If I could play every match on center court at River Oaks, I would never lose". Night matches made their debut in 1988 though to frigid reaction, literally. The temperatures for much of the week's evening play were in the 40 degree range.

In a striking example of past success not predicting future achievement, the 1989 tournament rightfully touted that the World Junior Champion Nicholas Periera of Uruguay would be playing. Also competing that same year was a "US junior standout" from California by the name of Pete Sampras whose future would include 14 Grand Slam championships, 64 tournament titles and 286 weeks ranked as the No. 1 player in the world...who could have known?

In my review of the River Oaks tournaments held in the decade of the 90's one thing seemed to be a constant, it rained a lot. The rain was so bad at the '91 tournament that plans were made and the site was prepared for a carpet to be laid and matches to be played indoors at the Summit. Fortunately a small window allowed for completion of the event on schedule. The 1992 final, which was won by Bryan Shelton, saw the only Monday final here in the modern era due to rain. An extensive drainage system was developed around the stadium court in 1995 which allowed for a tarp system to be used to protect the court.

Several of the game's greatest players returned to River Oak's in the 90's for encore performances. Bjorn Borg, Jimmy Connors, John McEnroe and Boris Becker all competed in a total of 10 tournaments highlighted by the 1994 quarterfinal matchup of Borg and Connors. The match was played on a Friday evening before a standing room only crowd. Ticket scalpers were spotted on the boulevard before the match which was won by Connors in three sets. The 1997 event featured Borg, McEnroe and Becker.

Luke and Murphy Jensen arrived at River Oaks in 1995 with their unique brand of tennis and entertainment. The French Open doubles champions from the previous year were a fan favorite and...during a television interview onsite here, Murphy ate an entire bag (21oz.) of M & M's in one gulp, (it was simultaneously hilarious and slightly disturbing).

At the decade ending tournament in 1999, one current and two future all-time greats came to River Oaks in decidedly different phases of their careers. Rod Laver joined us for the week to receive the Langston Trophy for his incredible tennis career. A four-time winner at River Oaks, Rod was the player most responsible for the Open Era of tennis. He was as remarkable off the court as he was during his legendary career. Also that year the 20-year-old duo of Bob and Mike Bryan made their River Oaks debut. Fresh off their NCAA championships at Stanford University they were in the first year of a professional career that has rewritten almost every record in the game, (and they're not finished as they have just completed their best year on tour at the age of 36).

Other notable facts:

- Houston native Richey Reneberg was the tournaments dominate player capturing two singles titles '90, '93 and reaching one final in '94. Additionally he and won three doubles '92, '96, '99 and was a finalist in '94 as well as the Langston award recipient in '91.
- The west and south stadium was redone and expanded prior to the 1992 tournament as well as the ticket offices and press room and television platform.
- Harry Parten retired as Tournament Director in 1993 after 29 years of distinguished service to River Oak Country Club.
- World No. 10 Boris Becker makes his second visit to River Oaks in '97.

2000's

Tournament Chairmen

2000 – 2002 Mike Chadwick 2002 – 2006 Bill Hurt

2007 – 2012 David Modesett 2013 Mike Chadwick

The 21st century began in grand fashion for the then named River Oaks International as an 18 year old and 50th ranked player in the world from and Switzerland by the name of Roger Federer made his first and to date only appearance here. He reached the final that year losing to Magnus Gustafson and by year's end he would break the top world's 25. And the rest as they say is history as he is now universally considered the game's greatest player.

The brainchild of Chairman Bill Hurt, the special exhibition on Thursday evenings began in 2003 and featured such legends as John McEnroe, Martina Navratilova, Monica Seles and Pete Sampras. In fact history was made in 2006 when the exhibition match between Sampras and Robby Ginepri was the first tennis match ever broadcast on the internet.

A clay surface change was made in 2005 as we moved from crushed limestone to the sub surface irrigated clay we now enjoy. An unplayable final in 2004 due to a stadium court that would not dry (literally), led to the only Co-Champions in River Oaks history. Then Chairman Bill Hurt and previous Chairman Mike Chadwick were instrumental in leading the effort for that transformation.

A valiant series of matches in 2006 saw Juan Monaco of Argentina in the span of 24 hours play over eight hours of tennis with a 3 hour 45 minute singles semifinal victory, followed shortly thereafter by a 2 hour and 15 minute doubles final loss and then a 3 hour 30 minute singles final defeat the next afternoon.

In the late spring of 2007 the series of events began that allowed us to secure temporarily and now permanently the US Men's Clay Court Championship. An extraordinary effort by Chairman David Modesett paved the way for the tournament to undergo the unprecedented success we have enjoyed over the past six years.

Bob and Mike Bryan returned to River Oaks in 2009 and began a 15 match winning streak that included three titles ending with the 2013 finals. Also in 2013, the greatest team of all time earned their 600th career ATP match victory. The now obligatory jump in the pool by the tournament champions was started in our first ATP year when Rainer Schuttler and Ernests Gulbis took the plunge in 2008.

Other notable facts:

- Sponsor pavilion was relocated to the stadium - 2003
- James Blake captures 2 singles titles 2003, 2005 and a runner-up 2008
- Former No. 1 Lleyton Hewitt captured his 27th singles title - 2009
- New tennis complex completed in March just ahead of the ATP event – 2009
- International broadcast exceeds 100 countries for the first time - 2010

The Ernest Langston Sportsmanship Trophy

The Langston Trophy is presented annually to a current or former player or players who demonstrates great sportsmanship during the competition. The award is named for Ernest Langston, who served as River Oaks International Tournament Chairman from 1946-49 and 1952-56. The award was first presented at the River Oaks International in 1957. When the U.S. Men's Clay Court Championship moved to River Oaks Country Club in 2008, the tradition of honoring an athlete with the Langston Trophy continued. The award has been given 63 times to a total of 67 different individuals.
